PENTECOST

PENTECOST is celebrated 50 days after Easter. It celebrates the birthday of the Church, when the Holy Spirit came upon the Apostles in the Book of Acts.

We are told that the Apostles of our Lord were gathered together in one place. Suddenly a sound came from heaven like a rushing wind, filling the entire house where they were sitting. Then tongues of fire appeared, and sat on each one of the Apostles. They were filled with the Holy Spirit.

Heavenly King, Comforter, the Spirit of Truth, everywhere present and filling all things,
Treasury of blessings and Giver of life: come and abide in us; cleanse us from every impurity and save our souls, O Good One.

Is It Safe to Read the Bible Again?
The Four Senses of Scripture

Swimming with sharks

Growing up in California, I spent many hours swimming at the beach. On occasion, the siren would sound calling swimmers out of the water. Then, after a period of time, the siren would sound again indicating it was safe to go back in the water. Similarly, this article is a siren indicating it is safe to go back in the Bible again.

We've been intimidated into not reading the Bible. Our imagination tells us that there are shark-like "Bible-experts" who want to devour us for not using their favorite critical methods. Our experience may tell us there is too much confusion or even conflict over what the Bible means. Our pragmatism, driven by limited time and energy, tells us we don't have what it takes to read the Bible and make sense of it. If you have been staying away from the Bible for these reasons, I encourage you to go back in the Bible again. Here's why.

Scripture as sacred resource

The most important reason is that the Bible is an oceanic resource for your life. The Bible is shallow enough for beginners to wade in and deep enough for experts to drown in. Put in another way, the Bible can never be exhausted of meaning whether you have prior knowledge and skills or not. That is to say, there are many senses of Scripture, which can accommodate many kinds of people and whatever level they are at.

Four senses of Scripture

For thousands of years, Christians have recognized that there are at least "four senses" of Scripture: the literal, the allegorical, the moral, and the mystical. Each sense builds on the previous level.

The literal sense refers to the historical message of the passage "back-then-and-there." It's the plain meaning of the text. For example, if the text describes Jesus casting out a demon, then the text is about Jesus having the power and authority to dispel evil. True, your understanding can be enhanced by experts, but with or without expert commentary, you can get a general idea of the literal sense of almost any passage in the Bible.

The allegorical sense refers to finding personal significance in the passage you have chosen. As you read the text for its plain meaning (literal sense), it slowly dawns on you that the passage is about you, about your life, and about the characters in your own drama (allegorical sense). Your life is mirrored in the text. It can get personal. You are here, alone, with God. No Bible expert or friend can help with this level of reading. For example, when you read that Christ drove out a demon (the literal sense), you may recognize Christ is also trying to drive out demons in your life (allegorical sense). Because the allegorical sense is so personal, different people can derive different "meanings" (or "significance") from the text.

The moral sense refers to how the passage shapes your values and behaviors. For example, if come to believe that Christ is driving out demons in your life (allegorical sense), then you might also realize you must act on that by adjusting your attitudes, beliefs, and behaviors (moral sense). When you embrace the moral sense, you become a "doer of the word and not a hearer only" (James 1:22-25). Again, this is personal-- sometimes liberating, sometimes painful-- and Bible experts are no help here. What is helpful is a community of friends trying to enact the Word in their own lives too! They can offer encouraging, and sometimes cautionary, words.

The mystical sense points to spiritual realities that transcend earthly existence and lift up desire for God. Here you encounter God. As you read, you transcend the pettiness of your own life and embrace the world from a transcendent, eternal perspective. Again, it's you and God in an act of sanctified imagination. To follow our example, the text is no longer about Christ casting out a demon (literal), nor about Christ casting out your demons (allegorical), nor about the Word (moral), but about God's eternal redemptive purposes for all human kind (mystical).

The next time you read the Bible, try reading at the four levels. I find short episodes in the Gospels the best place to begin. See, for example, Jesus casting out the demon (Mk 1:21-28), Jesus healing the blind man (Mk 8:22-26), or the Parable of the Good Samaritan (Lk 10:25-37). Remember, the Bible is about you!

MOTHERS 4 MOTHERS

We met on April 12 with 15 families attending. Community Police Officer Sara Voyles presented the program. She was wonderful. She stayed an extra hour to answer questions. There were many questions including family violence, child abuse, discipline, teen age rebellion, neighborhood issues, and internet safety. This was her second visit and we hope to have her come back again. The most important thing she told us was that if you stand up straight, hold your head up, speak confidently, and keep an eye on your surroundings; it's unlikely that anyone will bother you. Another important message was that children who are disciplined and know what is expected of them will feel love and secure. They'll be much less likely to act up when they get older. We enjoyed the free tickets to the Shriner's Circus also. Circus' don't change much, but they provide a great family activity. Coming in May we will hold a belated Mother's Day Tea and a family cook out at the park. Coming in June-- the Stone Soup Fund Raiser and Mr. Reynolds, a liaison for parents with Youthville.
